

A Legend of Donner Lake.

Among the survivors of the Donner party was a girl, twelve years of age. After finding the starvation and misery of that memorable winter when they were snowed in at Donner Lake, the few who survived made their way over the mountains. There were no roads, and great and almost insuperable obstacles were encountered by these starving immigrants. At one place, a short distance this side of the summit, the wagons had to be hoisted up a very steep place, by ropes attached to a large tamarack. They were assisted at this juncture by a few Washoe Indians, and among the band was a fine-looking fellow of about eighteen summers, who was particularly attentive to the party, and after scaling the mountains, offered his services to accompany them, as he was acquainted with the country. Nothing wrong was inferred from the offer, so he was gladly accepted. He not only went with them over the mountain road, but stayed in the neighborhood where the girl was reared for years afterward. He never offered any advances toward her, never offered her an insulting word, and although it was suspected that a strange attachment had sprung up on his part toward the girl, it was passed by unnoticed. When the young woman married, Noyah, the Indian, returned to his old home in the mountains, and the first place he sought was his old familiar hunting grounds by the shore of the high mountain lake. He refused to mix with or associate with his old companions, although his parents did all in their power to assuage his melancholy feelings; he became gloomy and morose, and spent his nights and days around the shores of the lake, often sleeping on the very spot where the family suffered the privations and agony of that cheerless winter. He soon became an object of curiosity for the neighboring Indians, and his strange conduct attracted the attention of their "medicine man," who advised the tribe that the young brave was bewitched, or possessed of the devil. This was a heinous offense with the tribe, and it decided his fate. One morning he was found dead among the bushes, having been murdered by some of his own brethren. He was burned with appropriate ceremonies as was the custom in those days. The story, although possessing a semblance of romance, was told us last week while out to the lake, by an intelligent buck, who says it is vouched for among the older members of the tribe. We had known of the fact that a young Indian had guided the party, and report had informed us that his name was "Truckee," after whom the river was named. Other informants say Truckee was the one who guided the Fremont party.—Truckee Republican.

The Chinese method of suppressing rebellion and restoring order has been illustrated in the province of Yunnan, which is much larger than Great Britain, has a fine climate, fertile soil, and abundant mineral wealth, and previous to the Panthay insurrection, had a considerable population. How that population was almost utterly destroyed is related by Mr. Davenport, who to Yunnan on a special mission by the British Government. At Talifu, the headquarters of the Mohammedan outbreak, not less than 160,000 persons were massacred, or driven into exile and 3,000 old men, women, and children were drowned, because, as a Chinese officer of high rank told Mr. Davenport, so large a number had been already slaughtered that the Imperialists feared to create a pestilence from inability to bury them. The destruction of life throughout the province was on a similar scale. The Chinese Salt Commissioner stated that nine-tenths of the inhabitants had "run away," a mandarin euphemism for died. The result is that the fields remain unploughed, the mines are unworked, the hills bereft of trees, and the water is unusual for irrigation. Yunnan, once populous, has now but a million inhabitants, and, if Chinese reports, corroborated by ocular evidence, are to be credited, the victims of the Panthay may be numbered by millions.

NAMES OF NAILS.—The terms "four penny," "six penny," "ten penny," etc., as applied to nails, means this: Four penny means four pounds to the thousand nails, six penny, six pounds to the thousand, and so on. It is an old English term, and meant at first "ten pound" nails, (the thousand being understood;) but the Englishmen clipped it to ten "penny," and from that to ten penny, and so it degenerated until penny was substituted for pound. So when you ask for four penny nails now-a-days you want those of which a thousand will weigh four pounds, but in these degenerated times, we question whether you will get a thousand in that weight. When a thousand nails weigh less than one pound, they are called "tick," "brads," etc., and are reckoned by ounces to the thousand, so you will see 8-oz, 10-oz, 12-oz, etc., on papers of ticks.

The Highest Railroad Bridge in the World.

The Cincinnati papers are giving accounts of the opening of the new Southern Railroad from that city to the Kentucky river, where there is said to be the highest railroad bridge yet built. It is 275 feet high, having three spans, the middle one 375 feet long, and the others 300 feet each, the total being 1,225 feet. There is a bridge in Switzerland which is 251 feet high, but with span only 141 feet long, and one at Varrugas, in the Andes, 252 feet high, with spans 125 feet long. The piers of this Kentucky bridge, except those in Brooklyn, are the largest in the country, the stone work being 130 by 47 feet, and the base of the iron work 117 by 28. The frame is all wrought iron, and was built out from the abutments toward the center of each span. The fastening of the junction points was accomplished in a novel way. One sunshiny day having expanded the frame work, the connecting bolts were fastened, and so much secured; then a second day of sunshine having given all the expansion the bridge was capable of, the bolts were made fast permanently. At the opening the other day, the bridge was subjected to seven severe tests and stood them admirably.

The London correspondent of the Sheffield Daily Telegraph writes. The sea-serpent story was clumsily managed, and most people would have seen through it. It arose in this way: At Oban some time ago there was an earthquake, or what seemed to be one, and the event was described by a correspondent in a letter addressed to the editor of a Glasgow paper. The editor was incredulous about the earthquake, and said so freely. At this incredulity the local correspondent, conceiving that his character for truthfulness was at stake, was very indignant. However, he concealed his wrath until a fitting occasion presented itself. In due time he invented the sea-serpent, with most minute details and incidents. This description he addressed to the Glasgow paper, which swallowed greedily the fiction while it had thrown doubt upon the fact. When the local correspondent had achieved this feat, and everybody was laughing at the Glasgow paper, he sat down and wrote a cool letter, in which he said that the body of the sea-serpent had been opened, and the only article it contained was a copy of the Glasgow newspaper which had the editor's comments throwing doubt upon the story of the earthquake. This indigestible paragraph killed the animal.

The high, sharp-pointed style of gentlemen's collar, which prevailed last year and was known as the "bull-dog," from its tendency to cut the wearer's throat and stab people in the face when they stopped to speak to him, has given place to a round cornered article that smooths the sides of a man's chin like a butter-paddle, and will be known as the conciliator.

INGERSOLL'S INFIDELITY.

Col. R. G. Ingersoll is on this coast lecturing on various subjects, and attacks Christianity. Many are led away for the time being by what he says, but we have noticed that such things are a nine-day wonder and are forgotten, while Christianity goes on unchanged and unchecked. Christians sit and listen to his utterances and are not affected in the least thereby, while the skeptic grasps Ingersoll's ideas just as they do everything else which suits them for the time. But until something is presented which will elevate men and make them better men and better citizens, all of the new-fangled forms of infidelity will fail. After all Ingersoll is but presenting Tom Paine in another garb, and he will but make one more dupe to infidelity. When his presence is lacking his theology will die still-born, and be buried in the oblivion of forgetfulness. Such things will continue, we suppose, until the end of time.

The Circus.

Montgomery Queen's Great Circus and Menagerie will exhibit in Reno, Friday, June 21. Read what the San Francisco Chronicle has to say of this monster exhibition: "On Monday last Queen's California Menagerie and Circus commenced its third and last week's season in this city, and as usual, the tents were crowded in the evening, while there was a large attendance in the afternoon. Since the opening performance on the 21 instant, the attendance has been of the most flattering nature, the audience not only being very large but enthusiastic as well. Mr. Queen has certainly succeeded in getting together a magnificent equestrian company, largely composed of the strongest stars in the profession. Among the most prominent we will notice Mlle. Turnour, a young, symmetrical, and handsome young lady, who as a balancing trapeze artist has in our opinion, no living equal in her line of business. She executes the most startling and thrilling feats upon a swinging trapeze that has ever been witnessed in this or any other city. Ellen Cooke, a beautiful and dashing equestrienne fairly thrills the audience with enthusiasm by her wonderful riding. Woods Cooke is also an accomplished somersault rider, while Signor Sebastian is without doubt the most graceful, daring and accomplished equestrian now before the public. Funny Joe Kennel manages to keep the audience in a continuous roar of laughter while he is in the ring. James Cooke and Sam Rinehart are able and funny assistants. Both the tumbling and leaping is first-class; the double somersault throwing over a number of camels and elephants being particularly exciting. Mr. Queen has largely invested in rare animals this season, making his zoological collection about as complete as possible. The two horned rhinoceros and horned horse are noble specimens, and can be seen at each exhibition. The street procession is gorgeous in the extreme, and is conceded by all who have seen it to be the finest spectacle yet seen upon our streets."

The New York Times is informed that the Sweeny matter has been settled by his paying $250,000 to the city.

The Nevada State Mill Company, Reno, have on hand a full supply of dairy feed, bran, shorts, middlings, etc., which they offer at reduced rates. They are also in receipt of a choice supply of California corn, from which they are turning out a superior article of corn meal in sacks to suit. They also sell at lowest rates grains, flour, meals and all sorts of mill stuffs. They solicit orders from the trade only, and warrant their goods of the best quality.

Open Letter from Pinney.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 6th.—Pinney publishes an open letter to Senator Sargent in the Chronicle this morning, claiming that they were once intimate and confidential friends, but that since he had left the country Sargent has gone back on him and proclaimed him a scoundrel. He then attacks the Senator for his failure to secure reform in the Federal affairs of California, and by innuendo connects him with the alleged irregularities. He accuses him of having taken off the collar of the Central Pacific Railroad to put on Carr's, and says Carr is trying to get the writer convicted of felony so as to destroy his evidence against his former political associates. In answer to Sargent's statement that he had been but slightly acquainted with Pinney, and wrote him but one letter, and that one of rebuke for his management of affairs in the Pay Inspector's office, Pinney claims to have received several confidential letters from him, a number of which had been obtained by Carr from Pinney's wife and destroyed. He says he has further revelations to make.

All Quiet in Utah.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Tribune's Salt Lake dispatch says a delegation of non-Mormon citizens waited on General Crook to-day in regard to a general concentration of troops in Utah Territory. In regard to the story that Brigham Young is arming his people to make a fight in case he is prosecuted for complicity in the Mountain Meadows massacre, the delegation told General Crook they apprehended no danger of a general uprising of Mormons against the constituted authority of the country, but said that they did fear an outbreak in case Young is brought to trial for murder. General Crook replied that it would be time enough to provide for trouble when an indictment had been found. Meanwhile he had some companies of the Fourteenth Infantry now in the Indian country which will naturally return to their regimental headquarters here when relieved, and perhaps they will come very soon. General Crook makes a very short stay here. He will return East on the 6th. There is no occasion for a longer stay at present, as the Territory is quiet and the Grand Jury has adjourned to July 15th. The District Attorney has gone to Washington. He was summoned thither by Attorney-General Devens. The course he will take on his return is awaited with interest.

A Supposed Shipwreck.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—A dispatch to the Navy Department from Rear-Admiral Reynolds, commanding the Asiatic station, states that he has sent the steamer Alert in search of shipwrecked persons supposed to be on some island near the Dampier straits. He received his information from the captain of the bark Agate, who states that a native from King William Island told him that on one of the islands to the northward there were sixteen white men and one woman.

Forcing Specie into Circulation.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Treasury is paying out now only large United States notes for drafts. This is the beginning of a movement intended to place the United States Treasury circulation upon the European footing, with no small bills in existence and with specie as the medium of small operations. The idea is to get silver out in as large quantities as the Treasury can supply, and also to make the people prefer small bank notes to large legal tenders.

Forbidden to Print News.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 6.—By an order of the Minister of War, the local journals are forbidden to publish any matter relating to the war or to report incidents of battles or any facts.

Accused of Wife-Poisoning.

DIXON, Ill., June 6.—A remarkable murder trial is going on here. Elder McGhee, a minister of the Christian church, the defendant, is accused of having poisoned his wife for the sake of marrying a young paragon named Rilla Paddock. The fact of the poison being administered has been proven, also the fact that McGhee bought it and acted strangely regarding his wife's decease. A half-witted daughter of his has confessed that she poisoned her mother, but subsequently she said her father urged her to do so, knowing that it was false. The defense is trying to prove that the attending physician is the culprit.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Sun's Washington correspondent says the President last evening sent a confidential friend to the various newspaper offices to inform the reporters that he had a distinct recollection of all the contents of his letter to Garfield, save the concluding sentences. One of the first acts of the House of Representatives after it is organized in October will be to pass a resolution directing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to inquire whether or not there has been any design on the part of the executive power to use its influence to effect the choice of officers of that body or to interfere, by the dispensation of party patronage, with the rights of the House of Representatives. The letter to Garfield will, of course be demanded. It will be established by competent testimony that at least one special agent of the Treasury Department is now traveling in the South, appointed solely to find Democratic Congressmen who could be purchased by Federal patronage or otherwise to aid the administration to secure the organization of the House.

Frightful Accident.

LONDON, June 6.—The Widcombe suspension bridge fell to-day and about 100 persons were precipitated 30 feet into the river Avon. Eight dead bodies have been recovered and it is feared others have perished. Many were injured.

Another account represents the disaster as much more serious, but the details are not sufficient to know whether it is exaggerated or not.

Still later advices from Bath say that 20 dead bodies of the victims have been recovered, and several are still missing. It is now said that there were nearly 200 people on the bridge when it fell.

European War.

LONDON, June 6.—A dispatch from Ragusa, dated Tuesday, says the Turkish attack on Montenegro from the Albanian side has commenced. Ali Saib, with the whole of his force, advanced from Spurz up the Zeta valley, the object being to reach Damlogad. The Montenegrins met the attack on the hill at Maljot. The fighting is still raging, but up to noon the Turkish assaults were repulsed. Five hundred Turks had been killed. The Montenegrins fight against enormous odds, there being 35,000 regulars and irregulars against them on this side alone.

A Dangerous Rock to be Marked.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Secretary of the Navy has directed the commanding officer of the United States steamer Lackawanna, now stationed at Acapulco, to search for the rock, near the Tartar shoals, upon which the steamer City of San Francisco struck. When the locality of this rock shall be ascertained it shall be properly buoyed and notice given of the exact position.

School-house Burned.

BAKERSFIELD, June 6.—The public school building in this town was burned last night about 11 o'clock and totally destroyed. It had been set on fire in two places by placing rags saturated with coal oil under the edge of the building. It was erected last year at a cost of $6,000.

The Czar at Playashti.

LONDON, June 6.—A Vienna dispatch states that the Czar will arrive at Playashti to-morrow. A large force of secret police escorted the Czar on his way to Bucharest. Gen. Ignatieff has arrived in Bucharest.

Will They Cross the Danube?

VIENNA, June 6.—In military circles the opinion gains ground that the Russians will not cross the Danube. They expect such decisive successes in Asia that every condition of a durable peace may be secured from their efforts.

ALFALFA Grange, No. 1, will hereafter meet the 1st Saturday of each month instead of the 1st and 3d as heretofore.

The Atlantic says some people are too beautiful to die young. They do around here, however, and the same grand, inflexible, inscrutable law of nature preserves a maiden as plain as the back side of a tombstone to the age of ninety-seven. [Norwich Bulletin.]

Don Pedro says he found only one thoroughly truthful paper in America. We thoroughly appreciate Mr. Pedro's testimony, but not mentioning the Standard right out. Daily seven dollars a year. Weekly two. No trouble to wait on customers or show goods. [Bridgeport Standard.]

Love makes a hell of a paradise, but when a man has been sitting up in the back porch with the light turned down all night past twelve, his imagination in his footsteps reverberates through the shadowed street and he does not resist temptation to thoughts of poetry and love and things, as it does in the prospect that there are a few cold beans in his house. [Norwich Bulletin.]

An exchange says, "Shall we cherish the beautiful?" Of course we shall—two or three at once if necessary. It is a pretty mean sort of a man who will not do all the cherishing he can when the preponderance of women is as three to one. We have found, however, that it is not well to cherish more than one in the same town. [Norwich Bulletin.]

This year Philadelphia celebrated the opening of the Centennial. Next year she will celebrate the celebration of the opening of the Centennial. In 1879 she will celebrate the celebration of the celebration of the Centennial, and so it will go on forever. [Boston Herald.]

The city of Orleans, in France, celebrated on May 7 the 448th anniversary of its deliverance by Jeanne D'Arc. Flags were displayed, artillery boomed, high mass was celebrated in the Cathedral, and splendid fireworks were ignited in the evening. The old standard borne by Jeanne D'Arc was also displayed in the Cathedral and then returned to the keeping of the Bishop of Orleans, when father Monsabre pronounced a panegyric upon the heroic maiden. The Comte de Paris and the Emperor and the Empress of Brazil were present.

A new fashion in dinner parties is becoming known in London. It requires the dismissal of the servants after the first, and the bestowal of proper attentions upon guests there after by the ladies of the family. The fashion is spreading rapidly among the wealthy. In this country there is a fashion of dispensing with servants altogether at dinner parties, but thus far it is confined chiefly to those who are not wealthy.
